People (professionals, academics, students) dealing with nature conservation, geotourism, geoparks, education, management, sustainable development, planning and decision-making, and other topics related to the theme of "geoheritage" are invited to participate and encouraged to present their data/experiences by submission of short abstracts.

The Symposium will take place in Bari (Apulia, Italy) on September 25-26 2012, and will be held at the Sala Murat, Piazza del Ferrarese. It will be preceded by one day field-trips (two choices on September 24) and will be followed by a two days field-trip (on 27-28 September).

Bari is among the biggest towns in southern Italy, served by the international airport "Karol Wojtyła" and also easily reachable by train and ship.

The main aims of the Symposium are:

- to discuss land-use planning, threats and constraints;
- to discuss the recent developments in geodiversity assessment methodologies and geosites inventories in Europe;
- to discuss the legal framework supporting geoconservation strategies;
- to encourage a possible convergence between geoconservation and geotourism;
- to discuss sustainable management policies and geosites exploitation within geoparks;
- to promote the best practices and lessons learned in geoparks for local development;
- to enhance geotourism and its potential for regional development;
- to implement the most effective outreach methods for successful communication with the public and decision- and policy-makers;
